This document is the copyright of the Publisher. All rights reserved and remain in force.

The highlighted text changes created by SAI Global within this document ("Red-line Service") are for guidance purposes only. Such highlighted changes are generated by a machine running on SAI Global's work flow management platform.

The Red-line Service is provided on an "as is" basis and as such, SAI Global does not warrant, either expressly or impliedly, the accuracy, timeliness, or appropriateness of the highlighted information contained within any document supplied under the Red-line Service. SAI Global recommends that if users of such documents require them for regulatory or compliance purposes, they should always refer back to the original published Standards.

Customer acknowledges that SAI Global does not assume any liability or responsibility (except solely to the extent that such liability or responsibility cannot be excluded or limited under English Law) for the content of the documents (together with information contained in linked third party websites) provided under the Red-line Service including but not limited to highlighting errors, publisher errors, omissions, defamatory or copyright infringing material.

SAI Global has certain license obligations to honour including copyright permissions and these are passed through to the subscription services SAI Global offer via the i2i Solutions or any other Standards Management platform that may vary from time to time.

Therefore, the following terms apply to Customers' use of all documents provided under the Red-line Service;

- (a) You may view and print a single copy of a document contained in the Subscription for reference purposes only and only for internal purposes within the site on which such copies are made, providing such copies are dated and destroyed after the reference usage, typically no more than 60 working days after use, subject to the exception described in clause (b) below. Such copies may not be filed to form part of any hard copy reference collection.
- (b) Where you have a specification or tender requirement to reproduce a document or portions of a document as part of its documentation for external submission in response to a tender, the necessary pages of the document, including the whole document if required, may be reproduced and submitted provided a copyright notice is included. You shall notify SAI Global of any such use. For internal and archival purposes only, a paper copy may be attached to your documentation and shall be considered a permanent part of that documentation.
- (c) Under no circumstances are you permitted to reproduce all or part of any document for external use (outside of the subscription address) or for use in any other site or group of sites, except as set forth in (b) above.
- (d) You may not remove any proprietary markings or electronic watermarks, including any copyrights and trademarks.
- (e) You may copy a maximum of 25% of the content of a document within the Subscription and paste it to another document strictly for internal use only. The copied content in the new document must contain a copyright notice "Copyright [name of publisher] Date where date is the date of copyrighted material. Such content is licensed for use only for the duration of the relevant Subscription.
- (f) For ISO standards, the material is reproduced from ISO publications under International Organization for Standardization (ISO) Copyright License number SAI GLOBAL/MCEA/2008. Not for resale. No part of these ISO publications may be reproduced in any form, electronic retrieval system or otherwise, except as allowed under the copyright law in the country of use, or with the prior written consent of ISO (Case postale 56, 1211 Geneva 20, Switzerland, email: copyright@iso.org) or ISO's Members.
